Access arrangements

Access arrangements are used in any year group to support pupils with:

- difficulty reading

- difficulty writing

- difficulty concentrating

- difficulty processing information

- a hearing impairment

- a visual impairment

- English as an additional language

Teachers will evidence these barriers to learning. The arrangements to support these pupils will take the form of additional time, adaptations to papers, early opening of papers, compensatory marks for spelling, scribes or additional resources (such as word processors).

- It is administered in June to all pupils in Year 1. Your child's class teacher will administer the check.
- It consists of 40 words - a mixture of pseudo words and real words. Pupils need to say 32 accurately to pass the check.
- Each check will take approximately 10 minutes.
- If a child does not pass the check, they will undertake another check at the end of Year 2.

KS2 administration

- In grammar, teachers may explain or rephrase a question provided they do not give away subject-specific information. For example, if a question asks to “insert a pair of commas”, ‘insert’ may be explained, but not ‘commas’. In spelling, teachers should take care not to overemphasise spelling when reading out the words pupils need to spell.
- In reading, no part of the reading answer booklet or reading booklet may be read to pupils or rephrased. If a pupil asks a question about test content, teachers must not explain the meanings of any words or expressions.
- In maths, if a pupil requests it, a question may be read to them on a one-to-one basis. Teachers can read words and numbers but not mathematical symbols. At a pupil’s request, teachers may point to parts of the test paper such as charts, diagrams, statements and equations, but teachers must not explain the information or help the pupil by interpreting it.

KS2 Teacher Assessment - writing

- Teachers will assess a pupil against a range of statements that relate to the KS2 English curriculum.
- Pupils' writing, on which teachers base their judgements, must be produced independently by the pupil.
- Teachers are given flexibility in reaching a rounded judgement about a pupil's overall attainment in writing.

Parents and carers will be informed of their child's outcomes from the statutory period in their end-of-year report.
